

Abstract

A device for measuring weight in a vehicle has an expansion unit which becomes elongated under the influence of the weight, and a sensor system being present which determines the elongation through a transit time measurement. Ultrasonic pulses are preferably used for the transit time measurement.

(Figure 1)

10